

Wrinkle Relaxer Guide: Your Path to Natural, Youthful Results

Wrinkle relaxers are neuromodulators used to temporarily reduce the appearance of fine lines and wrinkles by relaxing facial muscles. These treatments are FDA-approved and widely used to maintain a youthful yet natural look.

At I Love My Look Aesthetics, we focus on subtle enhancements that maintain facial harmony without an overdone appearance.

Types of Wrinkle Relaxers We Offer

1

Botox

The most well-known neuromodulator, Botox (onabotulinumtoxinA), has been extensively studied and used for decades. It is effective in reducing dynamic wrinkles and preventing deeper lines over time.

2

Jeuveau

Often called "Newtox," Jeuveau (prabotulinumtoxinA) is a modern alternative to Botox. It is designed specifically for aesthetic use and is known for its smooth, natural-looking results.

3

Dysport

Dysport (abobotulinumtoxinA) has a slightly different formulation, allowing for a quicker onset and a more spread-out effect. It is particularly effective for treating larger areas like the forehead.

4

Letybo

Letybo (letibotulinumtoxinA) is a newer neuromodulator that provides precise and long-lasting wrinkle relaxation, with a formulation designed for fine-tuned results.

How Do Wrinkle Relaxers Work?

Botulinum toxin type A temporarily blocks nerve signals to targeted muscles, preventing excessive contractions that cause wrinkles. This results in smoother skin while preserving natural expressions.

- Dynamic wrinkles, caused by repeated facial movements (e.g., frowning, squinting), are most effectively treated.
- Static wrinkles, deeper lines present even at rest, can be softened over time with consistent treatments.

Frequently Asked Questions

1

When should I start getting wrinkle relaxers?

Many start in their late 20s to early 30s for prevention, but they are effective at any age.

2

How often should I get treated?

Every 3-4 months to maintain results.

3

Does it hurt?

Most clients describe a slight pinch, and the procedure is quick.

4

Can I combine this with other treatments?

Absolutely! Wrinkle relaxers work well with skin-tightening treatments and collagen-boosting procedures.
